Number of Years in Tomball

16 years.

Career and Service History

Ben Sedberry is a technology executive and nonprofit founder with experience leading complex projects, managing teams, and overseeing long-term planning efforts across multiple states. Earlier in his career, he worked internationally, including involvement with the Vancouver Winter Olympics. After that experience, Ben chose to move his family to Tomball, where he knew he was meant to put down roots and build a life centered on service, responsibility, and community.

As CEO of USA Magnum, Ben leads a nationwide technology services organization that supports businesses with operational planning, infrastructure decisions, and evolving technology needs. His work requires balancing budgets, managing vendor partnerships, and making practical decisions that affect people, timelines, and resources. Locally, Ben serves as President of the Cherry Meadows Homeowners Association, where he works directly with residents, city staff, and county partners on issues such as traffic safety, drainage, infrastructure coordination, and long-range neighborhood planning.

Passions and Interests Related to Candidacy

Ben has a strong interest in technology and hands-on problem solving. Outside of his professional work, he spends much of his free time working with emerging technologies, including artificial intelligence, robotics, drones, and automation systems. He recognizes that cities increasingly face decisions involving new technologies in areas such as infrastructure, public safety, and policy development, and values informed, practical discussion when evaluating how these tools intersect with community needs.

Personal Details, Community Involvement, and Volunteer Activities

Ben is actively involved in his neighborhood and regularly engages with local small business owners, listening to concerns and offering informal technology guidance when helpful. He is raising three daughters in Tomball and is closely involved in their schooling and activities. Two of his daughters attend high school and one attends middle school, with interests that include theater, participation in a STAR academy program, and music performance on the cello.

Ben is a Christian and attends church regularly, as well as worship events throughout the Houston area. In his personal time, he enjoys gardening and grows tomatoes, basil, and green onions at home.
